Zeppelin Fleet Strikes Terror Among Refugees—Allies' Transports Rush Re-Enforcements—Not Draws Tighter About City.

Today's war news directs attention to the probable fate of the Belgian army. Since the withdrawal of the government from Brussels to Antwerp the entire fighting force of the little kingdom has been concentrated in or about the latter city and now Antwerp is gravely threatened.

Advices from neutral sources confirm the disputed German claims that they have broken through the outer circle of fortifications, crossed the river Meuse and brought their big guns within range of the city proper. The Belgian government has been transferred to Ostend. The populace is fleeing into Holland and flags of mercy are flying from the steeples of churches to indicate that these structures, if spared, will not be utilized in the desperate defense that the garrison is expected to make.

If the city falls the Belgian army will have the alternative, barring surrender, of attempting to fight its way through a German infested country in order to effect a juncture with the Allies or of retreating into Holland, there to be interned until the war ends. The latter course would eliminate Belgium as a factor in the great struggle. For days Antwerp has been holding out in the hope that the left wing of the Allies would swing around in time to save the city. Recent reports from the battle line have made it plain that help from this source was extremely doubtful.

Little change on the battle line in the north of France is indicated in the afternoon statement of the French war office. It says that on the French left wing, the Germans have made no progress, while at certain points they have moved back. On the right and center there is no change, it is said. Violent attacks in the Woevre district have been repulsed it is stated but no details of the fighting are given.

According to the French statement, the Russian offensive continues along the front of East Prussia.

A wireless dispatch from Berlin says that the papers there report that the British and Japanese attacks upon Tsing Tau, have been repulsed.

Paris, October 8.—The following official announcement was made in Paris this afternoon:

"First—On our left wing in the region of the department of Nord, the enemy has made progress at no point. At certain points they have moved back, particularly to the north of Arras where the fighting is developing under conditions favorable for us. The operations of the opposing forces of cavalry are developing at the present time, almost as far as the seacoast on the north.

"Between the Somme and the Oise in the vicinity of Roye, the enemy is still in force, but we have taken the major part of the positions we were obliged to give up.

"To the north of the Aisne the numerical strength of the German troops seems to have diminished. Between Rheims and the Meuse, there is nothing to report. On the height of the Meuse, between Verdun and St. Mihiel, the enemy has drawn back to the north of St. Mihiel and some positions to the north of the St. Mihiel on the right bank of the Meuse.

"In the Woevre district, the violent attack delivered by the enemy to the west of Apremont has failed.

"On our right wing, Lorraine and the Vosges, there has been no change. In Russia along the line of East Prussia, the fighting continues. Very spirited fighting is taking place on the frontier to the west of Suwalki."

GUN FIGHT VICTIMS EXPECTED TO LIVE

State's Attorney Hoyne Begins Investigation of Shooting Affair in Chicago Streets.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Oct. 8.—The six victims of the sensational fight in the downtown district reeled well last night. Nathan Spira, alleged head of the arson ring who was shot below the heart and the most seriously injured, was reported in a critical condition, although he rested well. C. P. Barney Bertsche, the ex-convict politician and alleged clairvoyant, who was shot in the chest, was reported to be recovering. James Monahan and William Egan, who were himself shot through the right lung, will recover, it was said, unless complications are encountered. Ted Owan, a friend of Bertsche's, and Joseph Smith, a clerk who was shot by a stray bullet, was less seriously injured, and is expected to recover.

The inside story of the affair is believed to have many ramifications, and MacLay Hoyne, the state's attorney, has started an investigation independently of the police. It is said that Bertsche's alleged animosity to Egan was based on the latter's pursuit of the clairvoyant ring of which Bertsche was one of the alleged leaders. Bertsche was convicted of conspiracy in the swindle of Mrs. Hope L. McElowney of La Crosse out of $15,000. Egan unearthed most of the evidence against him and he was convicted but appealed.

ENVOYS' STATEMENT EXPLAINS POSITION OF BELGIUM IN WAR

LEGATION CHARGES GERMANY WITH ABSOLUTE VIOLATION OF NEUTRALITY PACT.

PLANNED AN INVASION

To Have Yielded to Germany's Proposition Would Have Meant National Dishonor for Belgium.

Washington, October 8.—The Belgian Legation has compiled the following statement of the Belgian case in the present European war, to answer the many inquiries that have been received on the subject.

By the treaty of April 19th, 1839, Prussia, France, England, Austria and Russia declared themselves guarantors of the treaty concluded on the 15th day between the King of the Belgians and the King of the Netherlands. This treaty provides:

"Belgium forms an independent state of perpetual neutrality. That is to say, Belgium was forbidden, in case of war, to take the part of the belligerents.

"Since then Belgium has fulfilled all her neutrality obligations; she has acted in a spirit of meticulous impartiality. She has left nothing undone to maintain and make respected her neutrality. Germany's violation of respect Belgium's neutrality has even more emphatically affirmed by one of Germany's greatest men, by the creator of the Empire, Prince, then Count Bismarck, written in letter Baron Neuhoff, Belgian Minister in Berlin on July 22, 1870 as follows:

"In confirmation of my verbal assurances, I have the honor to give in writing a declaration which is quite superfluous, that the confederation of the North and its allies will respect the neutrality of Belgium on the understanding, of course, that it is respected by the other belligerents.

"(Signed) Von Bismarck.

"On August 2nd, last, in the course of the day, the German Minister in Brussels, M. De Brouckere, gave an interview to the reporters of the newspaper 'Le Soir' and declared to them that Belgium had nothing to fear from Germany. He went so far as to employ this expression: 'Your house on fire, but your house will remain intact.' The same day, at seven o'clock in the evening, he communicated the following note to the Belgian government:

"Learn of French Plan.

"The German government has received unimpeachable news to the effect that the Belgian forces have the intention of marching on the Meuse by Givet and Namur. This news leaves no doubt as to the intention of France to march upon Germany from Belgium territory. The German government cannot help fearing that Belgium, in spite of the best of intentions, will not be in a position to repulse without help a force by the French of such magnitude. In this case it is sufficiently certain that Germany is seriously threatened. It is the urgent business of Germany to forestall this action on the part of the French by compelling the German government would be filled with lively regret if Belgium were to regard as an act of hostility against her the fact that her precautionary measures obliged her to violate on her side Belgian territory.

"In order to avoid the possibility of misunderstanding, the German government made the following commitment:

"First—Germany contemplates no act of hostility towards Belgium. If Belgium consents to assume in the war which is about to commence the attitude of neutrality towards Germany, the German government, on its side, engages when peace is restored, to guarantee the integrity of the kingdom and its possessions.

"Second—Germany, in return, heretofore, has accepted the conditions, to evacuate Belgian territory as soon as peace is concluded.

"Third—If Belgium observes a friendly attitude towards Germany, in cooperation with the authorities of the government of Belgium, to buy for cash everything that is necessary for her troops, and to pay indemnities for damages in Belgium, but if Belgium behaves in a hostile manner against the troops and in particular places difficulties in the way of their advance by opposition by the destruction of roads, railways, tunnels or other works, Germany will be obliged to consider Belgium as an enemy.

"No Proof is Given.

"In the case of Germany, no agreement with the kingdom, but will allow the further relationship of the two states to be left to the decision of arms. The German government feels that it is justified in hoping that this eventually will not materialize, and that the Belgian government will know how to take appropriate measures to prevent its territorialization. In that case the friendly relations which unite the two neighboring states will become closer and more lasting.

"Such is the German note. It will be noticed that the question of the alleged entry of French aviators and officers into Belgium, as has been stated in several papers here, is not mentioned in the document. The document in fact knocks that given for the violation of Belgian territory is the alleged intention of the French army to march upon Givet and Namur. This assertion is supported by no proof, and is denied by the French government, which officially declared to Belgium and England its intentions of not violating Belgian territory. On the contrary, the premeditated intention of Germany to violate Belgian neutrality is proved in the most irrefutable way, namely, by the affirmation of the German secretary of state, and by that of the German chancellor.

"To the request of Sir William Goschen, the English ambassador in Berlin, to be allowed to know if Germany would pledge herself to respect the neutrality of Belgium, the German secretary of state replied 'that this neutrality had already been violated by Germany.' Herr von Jagow went again into the reasons why the Imperial government had been obliged to take this step, namely, that they had to advance into France by the quickest and easiest way so as to be able to get well ahead with their operations, and endeavor to strike some decisive blow as early as possible.

Buy Cotton Goods Now

Never again is the American woman likely to have such splendid opportunities to buy cotton goods as she has today. The war has forced the price of raw cotton to an unprecedentedly low figure.

That, of course, means lessened prices for cotton fabrics and greater buying opportunities.

It would pay to buy cottons today and store them up. When the war situation clears prices will jump.

The stores are showing many attractive values, as can be seen from the advertising in The Gazette.

PETEY ABROAD—WE'VE SMELLED WORSE THAN THAT.

By G. A. VOIGHT

SPORTS

PHILADELPHIA NINE LOST NATIONAL RACE THROUGH HARD LUCK

Stellar Pitching by Alexander "The Great," With Proper Support, Would Have Landed Pennant.

By H. I. Sheridan.

New York, Oct. 8.—With the amazing record-breaking rush of the Boston Braves to the top of the National league after being a poor last the first of July taking up all spotlights in the world of sport some other possibly interesting features in connection with the annual baseball marathons have been overlooked.

One of these features—and one that deserves far more than ordinary mention—is the work of Grover Cleveland Alexander, that pitching phenom who wiggles for the greatest hard luck club in the world—the Phillies. This year Alexander has been breezing along at the fastest clip of any pitcher in the National league loop literally leading the batters in that organization on their heads.

Alexander, with a patched-up very ordinary club behind him, has picked up the best pitching percentage in the league. His work has been marvelous, considering the support accorded him. He has been the one and only consistent winner for the Phillies. He has worked, too, worked like a Trojan all year. Doolin, determined to keep his warriors out of the cellar, called on Alexander often and the big twirler responded with a victory almost every time.

Which causes us to pause and think what might have happened. Just suppose, for instance that Tom Seaton hadn't jumped to the Brooklyn Federals. Seaton, with his class, would have added at least twelve more wins to the Philadelphia club's standings. And those same victories, marking off a like number of defeats, would have put the Phillies out in front of the Braves, where they could not have been headed.

Another thing that figured strong in the slump of the Phillies this year was the absence of Shaverston Mickey Doolin. He, too, fell for the big salary inducements held out by the Reds. Baltimore got him. Doolin was in sore straits to plug the gap left by Doolin's departure. For the first three months of the season he kept trying out three different ones and in the meantime the ones getting to trials kicked many a game away for him. These same games would have been won in all likelihood if Doolin had been in the lineup. Reports now have it that Doolin is to be deposited this winter as manager of the Phillies. The rumor has floated often before. This year it really seems to be founded on fact.

Well, maybe Doolin hasn't made good. He hasn't if you simply look at the percentage table, showing where the Phillies finished, but if you've followed the career of the red-headed scrapping leader you know that he hasn't fallen down on the job through lack of ability.

Doolin takes the prize for being the most unlucky cuss that ever attempted to drive a ball club to victory. He knows baseball, knows it like a book. He knows how to play it and knows also how to teach others to play it. He can handle men so that he can get the most out of them. But when it comes to wrestling with Fate and putting that old joy-killer's shoulders to the mat the sorrel-topped one isn't there. He admits that is out of his line.

And Fate has sure handed some terrific wallops to the fighting jaw of Doolin. In fact this Fate person seems to have taken a supreme delight in just scattering its punishment along so that it could hand the red head enough every season to keep out of the running.

Ever since he has been at Philadelphia Doolin has had a pennant winning aggregation—in the spring. The critics are all unanimous in the verdict that on straight form Doolin's club should make a parade out of the pennant derby with themselves so far out in front that there wouldn't be anything to it. And just as regularly before the season was very old Old Man Fate would come along and soak Doolin in the jaw for the count of ten. First Fate put over his wallop in the shape of injuries to players. He would see that just enough of Doolin's stars got hurt to seriously cripple the team. When they would recover he would see that others jumped up keeping the regular team shot to pieces all the time. Then next Fate showed himself by getting Doolin's star outfielder, Shortstop Magee, to slam an umpire, where the result was that the outfielder was out of the lineup for some time. And his absence hurt.

Fate's latest turn was to lure Doolin's stars away via the Federal league. Doolin might as well give up until he finds some means of banding this Fate person a knockout wallop. He is a loser on falls as it stands.

Hans Wagner has made 3,000 hits and something more than that, and a few of them have been made in world's series games. And the Pittsburgh Dutchman takes a greater pride in the bingles made in the post-season games than in the ordinary ones. A hit at the proper moment in a world's championship encounter is a greater thing than a whole flock of them through the regular season.

Smith's Injury May Prove Serious
Loss to Boston Without Deal
Shows Unusual Ability.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, Oct. 8.—While Philadelphia has enjoyed a big slice of the honors which accompany this right to be a contender for the World's Baseball Championship, Boston has not been wanting for a share in the glories of the annual championship series. When the clubs representing these two cities meet in the opening game for this year's world's pennant it will mark the fifth time that Philadelphia has entered such a struggle and it will be the third for Boston. Had the New York Nationals not refused to play with the "Eub" players in 1904, the Boston Americans would have had an additional opportunity of fighting for the championship. However Boston claimed the world's honors for that year by default.

Since the American and National league pennants first were contested each other in 1903, the Athletics of Philadelphia have played four times and won three past season series. The Boston Americans won the two that they fought to a finish, first beating the Pittsburgh Nationals in 1903. After waiting eight years from the time of the disappointing refusal of the Giants in 1904, the "Red Sox" had the satisfaction of taking Stanger McGraw's men into camp, scoring their second victory in the banner series of 1912.

Hitherto the American League was solely responsible for Boston's world's honors but this year the Nationals, "Braves," which they are aptly called, after a rush, which astonished all followers of the national game are in the forefront of the battle. The fight of the Braves is without parallel in the annals of baseball. From last place to first was their accomplishment, and this within a period of five years.

The Braves were lowest of the eight teams in the National league on July 13. On August 23 they had mounted to first place, tied with the Giants. It was ten days later, September 2, before the Braves went into the lead with clear title for the time being, and it was September 8 before they finally entrenched themselves at the top. But the historians of baseball will give their performance as: "Last place to first in 36 days. A record."

Only one team with the memory of present day fans' has nearly approached the extent of the Braves' remarkable progress. That was the Chicago White Sox of 1906 in their dash through the American League teams from seventh place to first. The White Sox were a team of general appreciation, high rank, showed low with bad breaks during the first of the season. The Boston, on the other hand, were dubbed the "lowly Braves" with little to indicate warrant to better name.

"Tinker to Evers to Chance," a byword in baseball circles for years as representing the speediest fielding on the diamond in the production of double plays has been supplanted by the relay "Maranville to Evers to Schmidt." The combination play of the old Cubs' infield has at last been uttered, largely through the assistance of one of its members, Johnny Evers, now playing the keystone sack for Boston. Evers and Maranville go into the World Series with one of the most remarkable fielding records in the history of the game. Within ten days of the close of the National league season, this pair had figured in nearly 100 double plays.

Evers, playing an improved game as second base, has nevertheless been outshone by his younger club mate Maranville took part in eighty-five of the double plays carried off by the Braves, a world's record. With the more numerous opportunities that were developed by shortstop position, he was responsible for the inception of fifty-three of the plays. This batters by a dozen the record of forty-three double plays held for several years by Fletcher of the New York Giants. Maranville has been middle man in twenty-six of these combination plays, and at the receiving end of six. With fewer opportunities, Evers has taken part in sixty-five double plays, has started twenty-three, made the put-out and assists in thirty-three and has finished nine. Maranville to Evers to Schmidt, in that order, has been the way of twenty-seven double plays. Thirty-nine have been accomplished by the three.

The team the Athletics will send against the Braves will be in all probability the same nine men who started in the 1913 series against the New York Giants, barring accidents. Chief Bender is looked upon as the sure money pitcher and there is no doubt that he will be sent in with Wally Schang on the receiving end. The Athletics, while the players are as a whole young in years, form a truly veteran world's series team. With the exception of Eddie Murphy and Schang all the regulars in the 1914 series played against the Giants in 1911. Bender and Plank, along with Harry Davis, Mack's lieutenant who occasionally goes into a game as a pinch hitter, played in the world's series against New York nine years ago.

Physically the world's champions will go into the series in good condition. "Home Run" Baker, who had been below par during part of August and September, has rested and will be in good trim to worry the opposing pitchers. He had been suffering from a cold and later from a wrenched side. His hitting was affected but he refused to lay off while the championship race was undecided.

The champions are well provided with utility men. Walsh who played "Home Run" Baker, who had been below par during part of August and September, has rested and will be in good trim to worry the opposing pitchers. He had been suffering from a cold and later from a wrenched side. His hitting was affected but he refused to lay off while the championship race was undecided.

a utility infielder of no mean ability. Captain Thomas, the world's series veteran, can substitute for either Schang or Lapp behind the plate and Harry Davis still has some ability as a pinch hitter.

In Philadelphia fans refer affectionately to the Athletics as "the most perfect baseball machine in the world" and an interesting fact developed in going over the records gives strength to this estimate. The Athletics have played in four world's series and with the exceptions of Mathewson and McGinnity, no pitcher who has ever faced them lasted the entire game. All have been taken out. Mathewson also had been knocked out. In 1905 McGinnity pitched in two games. He was taken out of one and won the other. On the other hand, no Athletic pitcher has ever been knocked out of the rubber. The single exception, where a Philadelphia hurler was taken out, was in 1911 when Combs, the "Iron man" suffered a rupture in the middle of the game and left the box several innings later because of his injury.

The Braves will be without the services of Smith, their regular third baseman, as the third sacker broke his leg Tuesday in sliding into second in the game with Brooklyn. Deal, whom Smith replaced, is billed to guard the far sack for the Boston nine. Deal was kept out of the game through injury and sickness, but of late has been in good condition, and is ready to play. Stallings and his team, while admitting the loss is a heavy one, refuse to become discouraged, and declare Deal will fill the hole satisfactorily. It was in such an accident that crippled the New York Giants last year and helped to their defeat.

Of the seventeen players batting 300 or better in the National league, six of them are with the Brooklyn Dodgers. Steele, Stengel, Dalton, Daubert, Wheat and Myers are all slugging at that handsome clip. And even so the Dodgers have been unable to do themselves honor in the National race.

Will Connolly of The Braves Be Slugging Hero of World's Series player in the Boston bunch to enter the series with a .300 batting average to back him up. Connolly's work at the bat has been a source of great pleasure to Stallings all season and many are wondering whether the Boston boy will be another Frank Baker.

There is never a world's series without the appearance of a new baseball star in every series so far some comparatively unknown youngster has come forth with a brilliant line of playing that has made him a hero overnight. Will Connolly's bat win him fame in the struggle with the Mackmen?

Connolly's batting record is crowded with extra base hits. He has made 31 of them this season: 24 doubles, 10 triples and 7 homers, a sum total of 65 extra bases. If he is able to deliver a number of these in the big games his reputation will soon be wide-spread.

Connolly is every bit as good a fielder as he is a batter. His work in the Boston outfield has been little short of sensational and he has maintained the brilliant clip set by his two outfield mates. With Mann and Catchers and Deal as utility the Boston outfield lives won and deserve the rep of being the best defense outfield in the National league. And they will not fall far short in a comparison with the outfield of the Athletics.

Larry Lajoie recently celebrated his 3000th safe bingle in fast company. The Cleveland vet. has enjoyed every distinction and privilege that might come to a star player, who has been in the game for years, but he has never had the chance to shine in a world's series. Lajoie is one of a very few of the real stars of the game who have never taken part in a contest for the world's title and it seems a pity that sometime before he steps from the game forever he can't be on a team that wins a pennant. His chances of such are few, especially if he stays around Cleveland through the rest of his baseball days.

THE GOOD JUDGE TAKES A SNAP SHOT OF THE POLITICIAN

YOU would rather take a clean, small chew, of course! "Right-Cut" users get real tobacco satisfaction from less than a quarter their old size chew—and they are passing the glad news along to their friends.

It's the Real Tobacco Chew. Made of pure, sappy tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is the Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shred so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

OUR BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

Across the broad Atlantic tonight there is many a household bereft of its breadwinner, many a widowed mother hugging her fatherless children, many an aged woman mourning her first born. In the homes of the rich and the hovels of the poor, on the farms and in the city, the awful toll is being taken. The fertile plains of France, the quiet valleys of the Belgians, the mountains of the Austrians, and the slopes of Poland all resound with the sound of shot and shell and the cries of the dead and dying. Last Sunday the world prayed for peace and yet the terrible struggle of the kings and emperors continues.

The accounts we receive are meagre and lacking in detail. They tell an unwritten story of the love of the Fatherland, of devotion to the country's flag and obedience to the government's orders. England, Germany, France, Austria, Russia, and Serbia are pouring out their best blood on the battlefield and we of America sit at home and shudder as the daily accounts appear in the press, and wonder and wonder what it will all end in. It is a war of worlds as it were. It is a devastation of the fertile fields, of the luscious vineyards, of the industries and the commercial life of nations.

There are a few cold-blooded individuals who see a gain for the United States in it all. A sordid gain. Blood money as it were. Yet there is far greater responsibility than rests on our shoulders, one from which we can not shrink the responsibility of the future. What will the harvest be? What will become of these fatherless children, these bereft mothers, these helpless widows? They must suffer in silence and upon the people of this great, vast country, this melting pot of the world, this nation of all nationalities, rests the responsibility of the future.

When this war is all over, when the last gun has been fired, when peace treaties have been signed, then comes the greatest work of all and in this work the people of the United States must play its part like men and women. No matter where your sympathies are today, remember the days to come, think of our brothers and sisters across the ocean and utter a silent prayer for their welfare. We must help care for these unfortunates. We must aid in clothing and feeding them. We must play the good Samaritan and cleanse their wounds and care for them.

It is the opportunity of centuries that comes to us this side of the ocean which we cannot shrink, and must face the stern responsibility like men and women to the best of our ability. To this end we should direct our energies at this time, to be ready to meet the inevitable.

TIME TO THINK.

It is time to think now who you will vote for at the November election.

Look at your tax receipts for the past few years and then see how they balance up. The Home Rule League asks the candidates some pertinent questions, some of which some of them find most embarrassing to answer, and some have even had the audacity to ask that answers be deferred until after election time might injure their chances of election.

The questions are all in your interests. In the interests of every thinking man and woman in the state of Wisconsin that hopes for a betterment of existing conditions and a reduction of the present tax burden. Mr. Philipp meets the requirement of these conditions and the voters should not fail to appreciate that in electing him they select a man who is better qualified for the business administration of state affairs than any governor in many a decade. It is not often that business men of Mr. Philipp's calibre enter politics and when they do they offer should be snuffed up as you would a bargain in any line of business. No man would trust his financial affairs to a mediocre business man of unknown qualities when he could secure the services of one well qualified for the place under the same conditions. Give it out for yourself and then give Philipp such a majority that the whole country will sit up and take notice at the return of sanity to Wisconsin.

What Blaine of Boscobel can hope to accomplish is hard to realize. How the men who are behind his candidacy will be able to demand recognition in the councils of the republic or demand of the republic in the future is hard to say. Federal officeholders, disgruntled republicans, discouraged democrats, all will flock to his banner as a means to show their petty grievance against the choice of men they do not personally approve of.

The republican congressional leaders are figuring pretty closely when they state they expect to have a majority of thirteen in members in the lower house at the next congress. The voters of the first congressional district of Wisconsin can do their share by casting their votes for H. A. Cooper in November, and thus insure an advocate of good times and a full dinner pail at least.

Congress is still seeking some method of fill the "pork barrel" with enough money so that the democratic members can make up for the lean years of the past and the lean years that are to come, before it is too late to make appropriations. All under the plea of "war taxes." For heaven's sake, United States that is at war with foreign nations? The claim is made that the deficit will come owing to reduced importations, but they do not stop to realize the fact that if the importations had continued as great as ever before with the sweeping reduction of tariffs the deficit would have been there just the same. But the war is a good thing to blame it, and thus save the face of the administration.

The world may stand aghast at the destruction of Belgium cities by the German hosts, but how about civilized, cultured Madison having a riot of its students at the state university, some thousand odd, who fight both the police and citizens, cut the fire hose, hauled out to defend the policemen, and are only dispersed when the president of the university arrives and asks, yes, could them to disperse in the name of the law. The world blames the Germans, who may have committed excesses under strenuous circumstances, and yet pass as student pranks the broken glass, the wounded police officers of a college riot in our midst.

The board of education calls attention to the city administration to the fact that automobile owners fail to comply with the law relative to passing street cars, taking out or discharging passengers. It is a good move, but they might go further and call attention to the blocking of the corners at Main and Milwaukee streets by these self-same street cars during rush hours.

He tried to figure out it was that crooked scheme to succeed.

While honest folk failed frequently and were sometimes in bad.

He figured on for many years. His fate is sad to tell.

WAR NOT THE CAUSE OF REVENUE LOSSES

Washington Correspondent Says Democratic Party Principles Only Cause for Revenue Bill.

(By Winfield Jones.)

Washington, D. C., Oct. 8.—The protests heard from New York to California and in the southern states as well as in the northern when the new democratic tariff tax was announced indicated that the consumer was hurt. The party of Wilson and the new freedom has forged shackles for so many lines of business that the necessities in its new bill of taxes that scarcely a section of the country escapes the assessment.

The people feel it in the tax on telephone and telegraph messages, in the taxation of popular amusements, in the extra charge which steamship companies are to make for tickets, and in the higher prices of wines, tobacco, and other luxuries. A large share of the new democratic tax.

Even the game of billiards and the innocent diversion of bowling must pay, and the chances are two to one and the size of the beer glass will be reduced in the new law. The "schooners" have been made a feature. All these petty annoyances to small traders and to the public are policies, inability to govern, ignorance of economic principles and extravagance in appropriations. The most serious of all the causes is found in the persistent demand of the government to recognize the demands of business for adequate protection from the imports which compete with American products, forcing the closing of American markets and throwing thousands of Americans out of employment.

The tax serves to cover up the heavy losses in revenue which have occurred since the democratic tariff has been in operation. The increase in imports and the decrease in revenue receipts are shown in the government figures. It is a direct contradiction of the administration's claim that the loss of revenue was due to the war. The free traders are evidently worried over the situation, as the majority report of the ways and means committee submitted to the house by Mr. Underwood expressly refers to the tariff situation, and declares that "but for the war in Europe, when the law and other sources of revenue would have yielded sufficient money to meet the government demands."

It is evident from the prospects of business that the democrats have made another blunder and have again miscalculated the temper of the people. In their theoretical legislation they fail to take into consideration the practical results, and as in the case of the ship subsidy bill when it was proposed to admit foreign vessels to the coastwise trade they learn of their mistakes only when men of experience counsel them. Whether the successive blunders, both financial and economic, already made by the present administration will be corrected by fortuitous circumstances, like the war in Europe, is purely speculative, but evidently the democrats must have played in luck at the critical moment when their policy was proving a complete failure.

CARNAGE IN FRANCE LEAVES BATTLEFIELD A SCENE OF HORROR

Correspondent Visits Region Between Marne and Aisne and Sees Burial of War's Victims.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Paris, Oct. 8.—The almost indescribable horror of the battlefield is suggested by a correspondent who followed in the wake of the armies as they drew away from Paris. News of the carnage is rigorously excluded from the region where fighting is or has recently been going on. But this particular correspondent was invited by a Red Cross surgeon to accompany him on a visit to the theater of activities.

Views Battlefield.

"The most awful carnage in the world's history has strewn the battle region east and northeast of Paris with countless thousands of rotting French, English and German corpses and disemboweled carcasses of horses," the correspondent writes. "During an automobile tour I have just made of the vast battlefield between Marne and the Aisne I have seen evidences of the pitiless character of modern warfare far more appalling than the most morbid imagination could picture."

So unspeakably horrible is the scene that it is probably principally with the object of preventing descriptions becoming public and making the whole world shudder that the French military chiefs so rigorously exclude war correspondents from the region.

"At an amazingly short distance from Paris, six days after the fighting, bodies are piled on the roadside in heaps, the side of which stands a soldier with bayonet fixed. Further out bodies lie in all conceivable positions in ditches and fields."

"The air of these fields is overpowering. The dead are being hurriedly as possible, but the battle carnage is so terrific it is impossible to keep time with the continuous slaughter."

"Pack Bodies in Trenches."

"Near Compiègne I saw pickets feverishly packing their comrades' bodies beneath the ground. Packing is the only word for it. Trenches 150 yards long are dug in meadows. The bodies, each resting on its side, are then tightly packed like sardines throughout the length. Above them are placed another row of corpses laid on their backs. The trenches are then covered in and all necessary see in the fields are strewn of fresh straw, each one meaning 300 bodies more or less."

"How appalling has been the toll of guns last week is vividly shown by the immense number of these ghastly slashes in soil to be seen with two or three hours' automobile run of Paris."

"The grave diggers make a long ditch in the middle of the meadow, then collect all the dead soldiers lying within 200 or 300 yards, then move 400 or 500 yards away, making a new ditch. Each long ditch therefore contains those killed within a circle ranging from 200 to 400 yards from the common grave."

"The only preparation of the bodies for the grave was to remove the little tag containing a number worn around the neck of each soldier. These are collected together and sent to the headquarters of each brigade every day."

Identified by Numbers.

"The dead soldier is only a number, but his name is thus ascertained, and in the official reports of casualties the distinction made between the dead and 'missing.' Names not answering to roll call after each day's battle are accounted for as missing, unless the name and number were turned up in some of the field hospitals."

"Familiarity with these acres and acres of common graves along the beautiful valleys of the Marne, the Oise and the Aisne soon breeds indifference. After traveling for miles along roads literally lined with bodies—many still in positions occupied at the time death overtook them—one begins to grow callous. Not only men, but women, even society women, acting as nurses, become inured, and when firing ceases grope among heaps of bodies for wounded without flinching."

"While many of the wounds are too ghastly for description thousands of Germans are found lifeless, bearing no flesh wounds, still leaning in trenches with rifles at shoulders. Death in such cases is caused by the deadly gases emitted by melinite shells."

START STORM SEWER FOR DRAINING WATER IN THE FIRST WARD

Extensive Street Work Being Done at Present Time—Complete Closed Culvert on Magnolia Ave.

Excavation work on the cement storm sewer being built on Pleasant street, north from Washington street, is progressing rapidly. A ten foot cut being made for a distance of a block up until today. The thirty-inch sewer, for draining surface water from the greater part of the first ward and the upper portion of the fifth ward, will be effected by the new improvement.

How much of the work can be completed this year is uncertain for limited time and ward funds will prevent carrying the sewer to West Bluff of Chatham street, where open gutters are to be built. This sewer will be connected with inclined holes from the gutters direct to the sewer, doing away with the clogged grate from the gutters. The new sewer will be laid at a depth of five feet below the surface of the street, allowing them to stand on the street. The problem experienced is that the water comes with too great a rush to the curb and gutters into the city and smaller sewers.

With the new sewer every street will be connected with inclined holes from the gutters direct to the sewer, doing away with the clogged grate from the gutters. The new sewer will be laid at a depth of five feet below the surface of the street, allowing them to stand on the street. The problem experienced is that the water comes with too great a rush to the curb and gutters into the city and smaller sewers.

Superintendent of Streets Goodman expressed a hope that the sewer could be completed as far as Chatham street this year.

The advantage and gain from clogging of the streets at no time has been more apparent than at present. Wherever the oil—especially the heavy type—has been laid the streets are in excellent condition and will be served. Unholy streets show plainly the ravages of the water, particularly at the intersection where the water has swept up the street surface and in numerous places washed out dangerous holes in the street and curb lines.

Hills have suffered greatly, the foundation of the streets being exposed, the water removing the crowning material to expose the street surface. Great trouble is being experienced with the drains because of the leaves clogging the intakes and basins. The residential streets for the last few weeks have fairly covered with leaves which were swept into the curbs, down to the sewers into the manholes. A force of men was set to work to clean out the basins to prepare for future rains.

The cement sewer on Magnolia avenue was completed in two days' time and the ditch dug to the sewer, a block down the street. Next year a cement sewer will replace the open ditch.

On Main street screened gravel—the type used in road work, was put in as a foundation to the hill near the brewery, over which a crown of clay was placed. This work was done today and a big improvement has been made. Because of the large amount of surface water coming down this hill it was impossible to keep the street up, and by making a good foundation of stone with a good grade it is hoped the street will withstand the elements.

On Sharon street a closed sewer caused considerable trouble and washouts were experienced at several places. The water swept over the street tearing up portions of the curbs. Clay was hauled to refill the places but the street in poor condition at the present time.

The improvement on Eastern avenue west of the railroad track with quarry rubble, is proving satisfactory, although the heavy rain caused much damage to the clay road. This street proves to be one of the best in the city, being a popular drive. Material has arrived for the repairing of the Monterey bridge and the structure will likely be closed late this week to start the work. The entire foundation of the bridge drive will be taken off and water-proof plank with creosoted blocks laid. At present the bridge is in poor condition and the work will be rushed as fast as possible.

At the Northwestern freight house crushed gravel in being placed over the yard, making a muddy and slippery surface over the clay cinder drive. It is expected the railroad will use this material in the improvement of the railroad crossings in the city in place of plank, the stone being more permanent and lasting. Both railroads have promised repairs to the council in the near future.

Cross-walks are being repaired throughout the city, the old brick being taken up and laid away upon a higher foundation. Crushed stone is then placed between the brick and the street pavement, preventing bad bumps that have caused much complaint. The work is being done because of a broken spring.

STREET EXTENSION CASE ARGUED TODAY

Jury Deliberates on Necessity of South Third Street Extension and Question of Damages.

Testimony was taken and arguments of counsel were given before a jury of twelve men in Judge Field's court today in the matter of the extension of South Third street. The jury retired shortly before three o'clock this afternoon to decide on a verdict.

Judge Field instructed the jury on the points to be determined. One verdict shall decide whether or not there the extension is necessary. In case the decision on this point is in the affirmative then a verdict shall also be determined as to the value of the land to be condemned and the amount of benefits and damages accruing to the adjoining property. Judge Field also indicated that a special verdict was possible on the question as to whether the damage to the trees, orchard and garden affected by the proposed street extension was in excess of $75, in which case it would remain with the court to rule as to the necessity for the street.

The land to be condemned and over which the controversy was made is owned by A. C. Krueger. John Cunningham was counsel for Mrs. Krueger and City Attorney W. H. Dougherty conducted the case for the city. The city's assessment which included both the value of the land and the damages amounted to $147. The figure for the Plowright property, the only other land affected, was $197 which was accepted without contest by the owner.

Mrs. Krueger's property, which is located in the case of the Krueger lot, however, the condemnation proceedings were necessary. Mr. Cunningham urged the jury to allow not less than $250 for the property, including damages.

MORE COURAGE IS BUSINESS NEED OF HOUR, SAYS GARY

Elbert H. Gary.

"What this country needs now more than ever is more courage," says Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation. "This is not the time for Americans to be 'quitters.' It is the time for prudence and economy, but not for hysterical economy. There is danger that some of our business men in their over-caution will wreck the mechanism of their own organizations, and injure everyone else."

Extraordinary Complaint. A divorce complaint filed in San Francisco recently contained the following surprising allegations: "That after the marriage of plaintiff and defendant... the defendant abused this plaintiff with his tongue... and thereby inflicted great bodily injury to this plaintiff and made her black and blue."

During the encounter he saw the three cruisers go down, the Aboukir after being struck by a torpedo, the Thetis and the Emden.

Bolt Moves Shaving Brush. During a thunder shower at Vine-land, N. J., a ball of fire cut curious capers in the home of Louis Castellena, on Grant avenue. Five children were seated around the table when the lightning ripped open the tablecloth in several places, cut the houleau on the floor in several pieces, singed the hair of one child which was on the floor, changed the talcum powder from the box to the shaving mug on the shelf, and put the shaving brush into the talcum powder box. The framework of the kitchen was splintered in several places, but none of the family felt the slightest shock.

NO FURTHER TRACE OF ESCAPED "LIFER"

Stranger Seen Again on Racine Road by Mallman and Farmer but No Warning Was Given to the Authorities.

As yet no further trace has been gained of the man, supposed to have been Wendel Kabat, the escaped convict who saw his way out of the Waupun prison whom it was thought was located yesterday in Rock county although Sheriff C. S. Whipple has kept a careful watch. Farmers residing on the Racine road reported in the evening of seeing the suspicious stranger again about three o'clock in the afternoon, but did not report the matter until late in the evening, making it useless for the authorities to make another search in the darkness.

A farmer named W. M. Scott is reported to have seen the stranger ducking into the weeds and the mail man is said to have watched the man going down the road and hide behind a tree until the wagon passed. None of these facts were communicated to the authorities in time to give chase, preventing a certain capture.

It is doubtful in the minds of the authorities if the man seen on the Racine road is Kabat, but his actions warrants a close and investigation. One hundred dollars reward is offered by Warden Daniel Woodward for the "lifer's" arrest and Rock county farmers should be on the watch for his appearance.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—The Ladies' Fashions Do Change Rather Quickly—

BY F. LEIPZIGER

The Last Shot

By FREDERICK PALMER

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons)

He was rather graceful, despite his size, as he touched his lips to her fingers. Just as he raised his head a burst of cheering rose from the yard. "So you've found that we have gone, you brilliant intellects!" he shouted, and glared at the wall of the house in the direction of the cheers.

"Quick! You have no time to lose!" Minna warned him.

"Quick! quick!" cried Marta.

Strassky paid no attention to the urgings. He had something more to say to Minna.

"I'm going to keep thinking of you and seeing your face—the face of a good woman—while I fight. And when the war is over, may I come to call?" he asked.

His feet were so resolutely planted on the flags that apparently the only way to move them was to consent.

"Yes, yes!" said Minna. "Now, hurry!"

"Say, but you make me happy! Watch me poke it into the Grays for you!" he cried and bolted.

Within the kitchen Mrs. Galland was a-sleep, slumbering soundly in her chair. Overhead Marta heard the exclamations of male voices and the tread of what was literally the heel of the conqueror—guests that had come without asking! Intruders that had entered without any process of law! Would they overrun the house, her mother's room, her own room?

Indignation brought fresh strength as she started up the stairs. The head of the fight gave on to a dark part of the hall. There she paused, held by the scene that a score or more Gray soldiers, who had riotously crowded into the dining-room, were enacting. They were members of Fracasse's company of the Grays whom Marta had seen from her window the night before rushing across the road into the garden.

When, finally, they burst into the redoubt after it was found that the Browns had gone, all, even the judge's son, were the war demon's own. The veneer had been warped and twisted and burned off down to the raw animal flesh. Their brains had the feverish glow of callouses forming. Not a sign of brown there in the yard; not a sign of any tribute after all they had laid hands on the murderous throwers of hand-grenades. Far away now was Fracasse's room; in oblivion were the ethics of an inherited civilization taught by mothers, teachers and church.

But here was a house—a house of the Browns; a big, fine house! They would see what they had won—this was the privilege of baffled victory. What they had won was theirs! To the victor the spoils! Pell-mell they crowded into the dining-room, Hugo with the rear, feeling himself a straw on the crest of a wave, and Pflizer, musty little, most ugly of all, his short, strong teeth and gums showing and his liver patch red, lumpy, and tremulous. In crossing the threshold of privacy they committed the act that gives the deepest wound of war's indignance, to go on from generation to generation in the history of families.

"A swell dining-room! I like the chandeliers!" roared Pflizer.

With his bayonet he smashed the only globe left intact by the shell fire. There was a laugh as a shower of glass fell on the floor. Even the judge's son, the son of the tribune of law, joined in. Pflizer then ripped up the leather seat of a chair. This introductory havoc whetted his appetite for other worlds of conquest, as the soldier-leader of the increasing crowd that poured through the doorway.

"Maybe there's food!" he shouted. "Maybe there's wine!"

"Food and wine!"

"Yes, wine! Were thirsty!"

"And maybe women! I'd like to kiss a pretty maid servant!" Pflizer added, starting toward the hall.

"Stop!" cried Hugo, forcing his way in front of Pflizer. He was like no one of the Hugos of the many parts that his comrades had seen him play. His blue eyes had become an inflexible gray. He was standing half on tiptoe, his quivering muscles in tune with the quivering pitch of his voice:

"We have no right in here! This is a private house!"

"Out of the way, you white-livered little rat!" cried Pflizer, "or I'll prick the tummy of mamma's darling!"

What happened then was so sudden and unexpected that all were vague about details. They saw Hugo in a catapulsive lunge, mesmeric in its swiftness, and they saw Pflizer go down, his leg twisted under him and his head banging the floor. Hugo stood, half ashen, half frightened, yet ready for another encounter.

Fracasse, entering at this moment, was too intent on his mission to consider the rights of a personal difference between two of his company.

"There's work to do! Out of here, quick! We are losing valuable time!" he announced, rounding his men toward the door with commanding gestures. "We are going in pursuit!"

Marta, who had observed the latter part of the scene from the shadows of the hall, knew that she should never forget Hugo's face as he turned on Pflizer, while his voice of protest struck a singing chord in her jangling nerves. It was the voice of civilization, of one who could think out of the orbit of a whirlpool of passionate barbarism. She could see that he was about to spring and her prayer went with his leap. She gloried in the impact that was too intent on his mission to consider the rights of a personal difference between two of his company.

It was the voice of civilization, of one who could think out of the orbit of a whirlpool of passionate barbarism. She could see that he was about to spring and her prayer went with his leap. She gloried in the impact that was too intent on his mission to consider the rights of a personal difference between two of his company.

"There's work to do! Out of here, quick! We are losing valuable time!" he announced, rounding his men toward the door with commanding gestures. "We are going in pursuit!"

Marta, who had observed the latter part of the scene from the shadows of the hall, knew that she should never forget Hugo's face as he turned on Pflizer, while his voice of protest struck a singing chord in her jangling nerves. It was the voice of civilization, of one who could think out of the orbit of a whirlpool of passionate barbarism. She could see that he was about to spring and her prayer went with his leap. white light of an impracticable logic. "In that case, please place a guard around our house lest some more of your soldiers get out of control," she went on.

"I can do that, yes," he said. "But we are to make this a staff headquarters and must start at once to put the house in readiness."

"General Westerling's headquarters?" she inquired.

He parried the question with a frown. Staff-officers never give information. They receive information and transmit orders.

"I know General Westerling. You will tell him that my mother, Mrs. Galland, and our maid and myself are very tired from the entertainment he has given us, unasked, and we need sleep to-night. So you will leave us until morning and that door, sir, is the one out into the grounds."

The staff-officer bowed and went out by that door, glad to get away from Marta's eyes. His inspection of the premises with a view to plans for staff accommodation could wait. Westerling would not be here for two days at least.

"Whew! What energy she has!" he thought. "I never had anybody make me feel so contemptibly unlike a gentleman in my life."

Yet Marta, returning to the hall, had to steady herself in a dizzy moment against the wall. Complete reaction had come. She craved sleep as if it were the one true, real thing in the world. She craved sleep for the clarity of mind that comes with the morning light, in the haziness of fleecy thought, as slumber drew its soft clouds around her, her last conscious visions were the pleasant ones rising free of a background of horror; of Peller's smile when he went back to his automatic for good; of Strassky's smile as he was dying; of Strassky's smile as Minna gave him hope; and of Hugo's face as he uttered his flute-like cry of protest. In her ears were the haunting calmness and contained force of Lanstron's voice over the telephone. She was pleased to think that she had not lost her temper in her talk with the staff-officer. No, she had not fared once in indignation. It was as if she had absorbed some of Lanny's own self-control. Lanny would approve of her in that scene with an officer of the Grays. And she realized that a change had come over her—a change inexpressible and telling—and she was tired—oh, so tired! It had been an exhausting work, indeed, for one woman, though she had been around the world, making war on two armies.

The general staff-officer of the Grays, who had tested Marta's temper on his first call, when he returned the next morning did not enter unannounced. He rang the door-bell.

It is a common saying that there are no old people now-a-days. That is more flattering than true. There are as many old people now as there ever were, in proportion to the population at large, but there are fewer, perhaps, who advertise their passing. The old people of today, as a rule, try to be more spruce, more agile, more debonair. They pay an attention to externals which would have been regarded as indecorous by persons of the same age a half century ago.

THE WORLD SET FREE

EUROPE'S ARMAGEDDON AND THE LAST WAR.

By H. G. WELLS.

Copyright, 1914, by H. G. Wells.

"It seems far enough away now," said Edith Haydon.

"But forty years ago?"

"No," said Karenin, with his eyes upon the mountains. "I think you underestimate the available intelligence in those early decades of the twentieth century. Officially, I know, politically that intelligence didn't tell, but it was there. And I question your hypothesis. I doubt if that discovery could have been delayed. There is a kind of inevitable logic now in the progress of research. For a hundred years and more thought and science have been going their own way regardless of the common events of life. You see—they have got loose. If there had been no Holsten there would have been some similar man. If atomic energy had not come in one year it would have come in another. In decadent Rome the march of science had scarcely begun. Nineveh, Babylon, Athens, Syracuse, Alexandria, these were the first rough experiments in association that made a security, a breathing space in which inquiry was born. Man had to experiment before he found out the way to begin. But already 200 years ago he had fairly begun. The politics and dignities and wars of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries were only the last phoenix blaze of the former civilization flaring up about the beginnings of the new which we serve.

"Man lives in the dawn forever," said Karenin. "Life is beginning and nothing else but beginning. It begins overlastingly. Each step seems vaster than the last and does but gather us together for the next. This modern state of ours, which would have been a utopian marvel 100 years ago is already the commonplace of life. But as I sit here and dream of the possibilities in the mind of man that now gather to a head beneath the shelter of its peace, these great mountains here seem but little things."

CHAPTER XIX.
The Dawn of Love.

ABOUT 11 Karenin had his midday meal, and afterward he slept among his artificial furs and pillows for two hours. Then he awoke, and some tea was brought to him, and he attended to a small difficulty in connection with the Moravian schools in the Labrador country and in Greenland that Gardner knew would interest him. He remained alone for a little while after that, and then the two women came to him again. Afterward Edwards and Kahn joined the group, and the talk fell upon love and the place of women in the renaissance world. The cloud banks of India lay under a quivering haze, and the blaze of the sun fell full upon the eastward precipices. Ever and again as they talked some vast splinter of rock would crack and come away from these or a wild rush of snow and ice and stone pour down in thunder, hang like a wet thread into the gulfs below and cease.

For a time Karenin said very little, and Kahn, the popular poet, talked of passionate love. He said that passionate personal love had been the abiding desire of humanity since ever humanity had begun, and now only was it becoming a possible experience. It had been a dream that generation after generation had pursued, that always men had lost on the verge of attainment. To most of those who had sought it obstinately it had brought tragedy. Now, lifted above sordid distresses, men and women might hope for realized and triumphant love. This age was the dawn of love.

Karenin remained downcast and thoughtful while Kahn said these things. Against that continued silence Kahn's voice presently seemed to beat and fall. He had begun by addressing Karenin, but presently he was including Edith Haydon and Rachel Borken in his appeal. Rachel listened silently; Edith watched Karenin and very deliberately avoided Kahn's eyes.

"I know," said Karenin at last. "that many people are saying this sort of thing. I know that there is a vast release of love-making in the world. This great wave of decoration and elaboration that has gone about the world, this efforescence, has, of course, laid hold of that. I know that when you say that the world is set free you interpret that to mean that the world is set free for love-making. 'Down there under the clouds the lovers foregather. I know your songs, Kahn, your half mystical songs in which you represent this old, hard world dissolving into a luminous haze of love. Furthermore, I don't think you are right or true in that. You are a young, imaginative man, and you see life—ardently—with the eyes of youth. But the power that has brought man into these high places under this blue veiled blackness of the sky and which beckons us on toward the immense and awful future of our race, is riper and deeper and greater than any such emotions.

"All through my life—it has been a necessary part of my work—I have had to think of this great release of love and the riddles that perfect freedom and almost limitless power will put to the soul of our race. I can see now all over the world a beautiful ecstasy of waste, 'Let us sing and rejoice and be lovely and wonderful!' The orgy is only beginning, Kahn. It was inevitable. But it is not the end of mankind.

"Think what we are. It is but a yesterday in the endlessness of time that life was a dreaming thing, dreaming so deeply that it forgot itself as it dreamed, its lives, its individual instincts, its moments were born and wondered and played and hungered and grew weary and died. Incalculable successions of visions, visions of sunlit jungle, river wilderness, wild forests, eager desire, beating hearts, soaring wings and creeping reptiles, flames hotly, and then were as though they had never been. Life was an unceasing across which lights played and vanished. And then we came, man came, and opened eyes that were a question and hands that were a demand and began a mind and memory that does not when men die, but lives and increases forever, an overmind, a dominating will, a question and an aspiration that reaches to the stars. Hunger and fear and this that you make so much of, this sex, are but the elements of life out of which we have arisen. All these elements, I grant you, have to be provided for, dealt with, satisfied, but all these things have to be left behind."

"But love," said Kahn.

Karenin shook his head. "You cannot stay at the roots and climb the tree," he said.

"No," he said after a pause. "this love story is just a part of growing up, and we grow out of it. So far literature and art and sentiment and all our emotional forms have been almost altogether adolescent; plays and stories, delights and hopes, they have all turned on that marvelous discovery of the love interest, but life lengthens out now, and the mind of adult humanity detaches itself. Poets, who used to die at thirty, live now to eighty-five. You, too, Kahn! There are endless years yet for you—and all full of learning. We carry an excessive burthen of sex tradition at present, and we have to free ourselves from it. We do free ourselves from it. We have learnt in a thousand different ways to hold back death, and this sex, which in the old barbaric days was just sufficient to balance our dying, is now like a hammer that has lost its snail—it plunges through human life. You poets, you young people, want to turn it to delight. Turn it to delight. That may be one way out. In a little while, if you have any brains worth thinking about, you will be satisfied, and then you will come up here to the greater things. The old religions and their new offshoots want still, I see, to suppress that thing. Let them suppress, if they can suppress, in their own people. Either road will bring you here at last to the eternal search for knowledge and the great adventure of power."

"But incidentally," said Rachel Borken, "incidentally you have half of humanity, you have womankind, very much specialized for—for this love and reproduction that is so much less needed than it was."

"Both sexes are specialized for love and reproduction," said Karenin.

"And surely," said Kahn, "when you speak of love as a phase isn't it a necessary phase? Without that stir, without that impulse to go out from ourselves, to be reckless of ourselves and wonderful, would our lives be anything more than the contentment of the stilled ox?"

"The key that opens the door," said Karenin, "is not the goal of the journey." (TO BE CONTINUED.)

If you are looking for help of any kind, read the Want Ads.

A man, hearing of the splendid profits to be accrued on a farm located in the heart of the dairying country, decided to sell or trade his northern land and move into the section of the state that literally flowed with milk and honey. He was an indefatigable worker—but when it came to passing his farm on, through the channels of trade, why he simply was not there. He hated the idea of advertising, because to him it looked like a waste of perfectly good money, to go down to the newspaper office and pay so much for space in their paper to tell his friends he was going to move.

He had lived in the community twenty years. They all knew him, and, at the post-office, when he drove in, he talked freely about it to his neighbors.

His wife was not of the same opinion as he on the subject—strange as it may seem, and she contributed some of her egg-money to the cause, by writing to her home-paper back south a ways and having them advertise the farm in its columns.

It is results that we ask for nowadays—not all the happenings that leads up to them, so suffice it is to know that the farm was sold inside of a month to a man who had always desired a northern farm. In the one advertised he found all his requirements at a price he was willing to give.

This is simply another case from real life, showing you how much it really pays to use the columns of the daily paper—if you have anything to sell. Have you an opinion on this subject?

HOW FRENCH PEOPLE CURE STOMACH TROUBLE

A household remedy of the French peasant, consisting of pure vegetable oil and said to possess wonderful merit in the treatment of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles, has been introduced in this country by George H. Hays, who for twenty years has been one of the leading down town druggists of Chicago and who himself was cured by its use. So quick and effective is its action that a single dose is usually enough to bring pronounced relief in the most stubborn cases, and many people who have tried it declare they never heard of anything to produce such remarkable results in so short a time. It is known as Hays' Wonderful Stomach Remedy and can now be had at almost any drug store. It is now sold here by all druggists.

GERMANY INTENDED TO INVADE BELGIUM SAY COMMISSIONERS

secretary of state to come to a clear conclusion in that respect. If the violation of Belgian territory was to procure a signal advantage to Germany, that she had a fear of bringing on war with England to attain it; then for Belgium to lend her support to the passage of German troops must have meant the certainty of fatal consequences for France. Thus for Belgium to have yielded to the German ultimatum would ipso facto have conferred a considerable advantage to Germany to the detriment of the other belligerent, and would have constituted a breach of neutrality.

"Germany concludes her note by threats. She engages, on the conditions already defined, to evacuate Belgian territory at the conclusion of peace. If Belgium behaves in a hostile manner, (that is to say, if she does her duty) Germany will be obliged to consider Belgium as an enemy. She would then leave the ultimate arrangements of the relations of the two states to the decision of arms—in other words, if Belgium does not agree to violate the treaty, Germany will treat her as an enemy and add a veiled threat of annexing a part of her territory.

"The moral fibre of nations is not always measured by their size or power; Belgium is small and weak, but her answer bears witness to her love of justice and to her respect of the rights of others. She would rather die with honor than live dishonored.

Belgium's Reply.

"That was made clear by the answer of her government. The answer was as follows:

"The German note has been a

"It has been shown above how much value can be attached to the assertion of the alleged intention of France to invade Belgium. That intention, and the realization of that intention, belong exclusively to Germany and they must be left in her possession. This is especially the case in view of the fact that the military dispositions undertaken by France, absolutely refute the allegations of the German chancellor. So true is this that when the violation of Belgian territory became an accomplished fact, and when the king of Belgium appealed under the terms of the treaty of 1839 for support, in maintaining the neutrality of Belgium which these powers had guaranteed, France was so little prepared to invade Belgium that it took her more than ten days to get her troops into the country.

How Belgium Has Paid.

"The world is familiar with the way Germany has repaid in Belgium the injustice of which she was guilty to use the words of the German chancellor: "Under the pretext that her troops were attacked by civilians and even under no pretext at all, whole villages have been razed to the ground. Important towns whose boast it was to represent part of the common inheritance of civilization were not spared. Their monuments, which have been repeated during the centuries in all the constant wars of which Belgium has been the theater, were deliberately destroyed. Open cities were bombarded. Exorbitant taxation was imposed upon conquered towns and when the inhabitants were unable to pay the taxes, a large number of their institutions, and nearly all the houses of the town were deliberately burned. They are now nothing more than heaps of ashes. Their destruction has caused a loss to the whole civilized world.

"Numbers of absolutely innocent women and children lost their lives in the fire which was started by the order of the German military officials. Of those who were saved, several thousand, including women enfeebled by age, and children in arms, are today wandering homeless over the roads, without food or clothing. They are not to blame for anything, unless it is because they belong to a nation which has refused to purchase peace at the price of dishonor. That can be the only crime accounted to them and it is for that they have lost all their possessions upon the earth.

Germany Knows of Wrongs.

"From the declaration made by the Imperial German Chancellor it may be seen that the German government is conscious of its wrongdoings. As one of the guarantors of Belgium's neutrality, it wanted to force Belgium to relinquish its neutrality for Germany's benefit. Because Belgium would not consent to this perjury, and because Germany could not reproach her with anything else, Germany invaded and covered with blood and ruin a small peaceful country of hard-working and honest people, a country which it had promised to protect.

"This attack upon her neutrality is the first violation for which Belgium asks judgment from the universal conscience.

"The entire Belgo-German question today is dominated by the fact of

How to Have the Best Cough Remedy and Save $2 by Making It at Home

Cough medicines, as a rule contain a large quantity of plain sugar. A pint of granulated sugar with 1/2 pint of water, stirred for 2 minutes, gives you as good syrup as money can buy.

Then get from your druggist 2 1/2 ounces Pinex (50 cents worth), pour into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with sugar syrup. This gives you, at a cost of only 64 cents, a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready made for $2.50—a clear saving of nearly $2. Full directions with Pinex. It keeps perfectly and tastes good.

It takes hold of the usual cough or chest cold at once and conquers it in 24 hours. It is a splendid remedy for whooping cough, bronchitis and winter coughs.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it loosens the dry, hoarse, or tight cough and heals and soothes the inflamed membranes in the case of a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacal, and has been used for generations to heal inflamed membranes of the throat and chest.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Make Walls and Ceilings of BESTWALL Instead of Plaster

The owner likes Bestwall better because it protects his house from fire—keeps out cold, heat and dampness—is quickly applied—takes any kind of decoration without panels—eliminates muss and damage of plaster and possibility of its cracking, breaking, etc.—and finally, Bestwall wears as long as the house.

The contractor and carpenter prefer Bestwall because it is easier, quicker and cheaper to apply than lath and plaster. Carpenters lose no time waiting for plasterers to finish inside—job is finished when expected—no expense for a man to clean up after plasterers.

The real estate man insists on Bestwall because it improves the interior appearance of the house, minimizes repair expense, makes houses easier to sell or rent and keep rented.

The architect specifies Bestwall, too, because it enables him to carry out his wishes and give his clients better service.

These dealers recommend Bestwall because they want to give customers greater value for their money. Ask any of them or the manufacturers for literature, sample and prices.

BELGIAN KING'S DELEGATES IN UNITED STATES PROTEST AGAINST KAISER'S METHODS

Here is the Belgian commission which has come to the United States to protest to President Wilson against the methods of the Germans in warfare. These men say that the destruction of Louvain and other Belgian towns was unwarranted; that the dropping of bombs upon sleeping Antwerp was without justification, and that the violation of Belgium's neutrality by Germany was not in accordance with the rules of civilized warfare.

quences would hardly be regarded as excuses for making for a long time premeditated the violation of the neutrality of Belgium and that she has even recoiled herself to the terrible danger of war with Great Britain, rather than renounce the advantages she thought she would gain by not respecting the treaty. In the face of these confessions the allegations that France wished to violate the neutrality of Belgium, an allegation supported by no proof, falls to the ground.

"To continue the analysis of the German note, one reads: 'If Belgium consents to assume in the war which is about to commence, the attitude of friendly neutrality towards Germany, the German government, on its side, engages, when peace is restored, to guarantee the integrity of the kingdom and its possessions.'

"Could Belgium without being false to her duties of neutrality, take up the position which the German government calls 'friendly neutrality'? That is to say could she allow the German armies to pass without opposition through her territory? Can the German government itself answer that question?

palpable surprise to the Belgian government. The intentions which the note attributes to France are in contradiction to the formal declarations which were made to us on the 1st of August in the name of the republic. Besides, it—contrary to our expectations—France is about to violate the neutrality of Belgium. Belgium would be prepared to fulfill its neutrality obligations, and her army would offer to the invader the most vigorous resistance. The treaties of 1839, confirmed by the treaties of 1870, commit to the guarantee of the powers and notably to the government of His Majesty the King of Prussia, the independence and neutrality of the Kingdom of Belgium.

"The chancellor of the German Reich said in a sitting of the Reichstag on the 4th of August: 'We are in a state of legitimate defence. Necessity knows no law. Our troops have occupied Luxembourg and have perhaps already penetrated into Belgium. This is against the law of nations. France, it is true, has declared to respect the neutrality of Belgium as long as her adversary respects it, but we know that France was ready to invade Belgium. France cannot afford to wait; we cannot. A French attack on the flank in the region of the lower Rhine might have been fatal. It is for that reason that we have been compelled to ignore the just protests of the governments of Belgium and Belgium. The injustice which we thus commit we will repair, as soon as our military object has been attained.'

houses were set on fire. That is what happened to Wavre, among other cities, whose 8,500 inhabitants were unable to pay a tax of $500,000. Terrible destruction. On the 15th of September, there only remained in that town 232 houses out of 1400. The town of Aerschot, with 3,000 inhabitants, is now nothing but a mass of ruins and more than 150 of its inhabitants have been shot. Dirigible balloons have been thrown bombs at night in Antwerp. It cannot be maintained by those who were in the balloons that they were trying to hit the forts, as the forts are outside the boundaries of the town, and a good distance outside them as well. Nor could the bombs thrown have had any effect upon the forts, which are even stronger than those of Liege. There was no warning of this bombardment, a fact which constitutes a violation of Article 28 of the Fourth Convention of the Hague, and more than a dozen people were killed, all of them non-combatants and several of them women and children.

This violation of the neutrality of Belgium. Therefore, there is not a single shot fired by a German soldier in Belgium, which is not manifestly and avowedly heaving most sacred things, the keeping of a solemn promise and the right of a honest nation that never wanted war, nor showed aggressive dispositions to be allowed to live its peaceful and neutral life.

"Such is the Belgian case: Humanity will judge it."

STATES HOMES MUST PROVIDE SLOTS OR BOXES FOR MAILMEN

Postmaster Cunningham Receives Instructions From Rep., Who Will Instruct All Patrons.

In accordance with instructions from Daniel C. Rogers, first assistant postmaster general, Postmaster Cunningham will notify all persons whose homes are not provided with mail receptacles to install boxes or slots in their doors. Written notices will be sent to them.

The statement of Mr. Cunningham sets forth that the use of private mail receptacles in the form of boxes or slots in the doors with oblate the necessity of patrons responding to carriers' calls at inconvenient moments, permit the safe delivery of mail at all times and contribute materially to the efficiency of the mail service.

When not compelled to await a response to his ring of door bells the carrier is enabled to cover his route more expeditiously and make more prompt deliveries. With a safe place in which to deposit the mail the carrier is able to reduce to a minimum the amount of mail returned to the postoffice because of the temporary absence of the patrons or failure to get prompt responses to his rings of door bells.

Mr. Cunningham said yesterday that the installation of boxes or slots in the door will enable the carriers to complete the delivery of mail to the end of their respective routes. They are not permitted to work longer than eight hours a day and often when they are delayed on their routes they cannot complete the delivery of all of the mail.

SICK CHILDREN LOVE CASCARETS FOR THE BOWELS

Give "Candy Cathartic" for a bad cold, sour stomach, constipation.

Get a 10-cent box now.

Most of the ills of childhood are caused by a sour, disordered stomach, sluggish liver and constipated bowels. They catch cold easily, become cross, listless, irritable, feverish, restless, tongue coated, don't eat or sleep well and need a gentle cleansing of the bowels—but don't try to force a nauseating dose of oil into the little one's already aching stomach—it is cruel, needless and old-fashioned.

Any child will gladly take Cascarets Candy Cathartic which act gently—never gripe or produce the slightest uneasiness—though cleanse the little one's system, sweeten the stomach, and put the liver and bowels in a pure, healthy condition.

Full directions for children and grownups in each package.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this gentle, thorough laxative which costs only 10 cents a box at any drug store.

Thoughts are Sparks

—flashes of the mind that decide for success or failure.

The question is, what kind of sparks does your brain generate?

The brain, like a battery, must be supplied with certain elements to generate thought properly. These brain elements are water, albumen and phosphate of potash. If any of these are lacking in the daily food, brain and body energy are vitally lessened.

Are any lacking? Listen! Water and albumen are plentifully supplied in ordinary food, but phosphate of potash—together with other mineral elements—is almost wholly lacking in white bread and the white flour products.

Grape-Nuts

—containing all the nutriment of wheat and barley, including the precious phosphates so essential to perfect bodies and active brains, provides a food at once delicious, nourishing and economical.

A morning dish with cream furnishes POWER for accomplishment that many a man has come to appreciate.

Common sense goes a long way toward success. To eat right often means to BE right.

"There's a Reason"

Grocers everywhere sell Grape-Nuts.

LUCK PLAYS PROMINENT PART IN WORLD SERIES

Will luck, in any form, manifest itself in the series between the Braves and the Athletics? 'Tis well, always in doing the winner of such a short series, to make allowances for the vagaries of fortune. Luck has decided more than one world's series.

Was it luck that saved the Red Sox from defeat in the world's series of 1912? Well, rather! A double-barreled dose of it, in the tenth inning. Snodgrass made his famous $30,000 muff on Engle's fly, for which he was well set. Merkle then failed to get an easy foul from the bat of Tris Speaker. Speaker took advantage of the life thus awarded him and singled, sending in Engle with the tying run. Yerkes, who had preceded Speaker and been given a base on balls, reached third on the hit, from whence he scored later on Lewis' sacrifice fly, ending the game and the series in favor of Boston.

Stop those Early Bronchial Coughs. They hang on all winter if not checked, and pave the way for serious throat and lung diseases. Get a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and take it freely. Stops coughs and colds, heals raw inflamed throat, loosens the phlegm and is mildly laxative. Chas. T. Miller, Ed. Enquirer, Cincinnati, Ind., had bronchial trouble, got very hoarse, coughed constantly from a tickling throat. He used only Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Was entirely relieved. Wants others to know of Foley's Honey and Tar. W. T. Sherer.
